Dear Helen, you know I've thought about you a lot lately, for how could I help? when, whenever I have on my white dress or the blue one you gave me, everyone says, "Isn't that the dearest dress!" I surely do appreciate it all; the girls all wish they had sisters and brothers like mine.

Indeed I don't care if you have the feathers off my old summer hat. I was tired of it anyway; but I hope you'll fix it so people won't recognize it, for I wore that hat everytime I wore any,
this summer.

I suppose my nasturtiums are all dead by this time. They were lovely when I was there, and getting prettier all the time. I think the credit was due you.

Mother asked if I have any instructors I had last year. I have only one - Miss Hastings in German, the one who taught me so much. The work this year is fine. We are studying phonetics now, it is a course meant for those intending to teach, the one with only seven members.

Thank you for sending the apron. I seem to be a lot of trouble this year, don't I?

Please give my love to May & thank her for the advice about the fellows. Tell I don't have to use them any more, as I have some nice, warm blankets from home. She's a peach. I wish she would come all her brother some time and stop off here. With very much love, Jen.
